THE STURTEVANT PRELINNEAN LIBRARY.

In 1892 Dr. E. Lewis Sturtevant, of South Framingham, Mass., a gentleman who, through his studies of agricultural botany, had become greatly interested in the records of wild and cultivated plants preserved in the early Herbals, Natural Histories, and Medical Botanies, presented to the Garden a large collection of such works which he had been accumulating for a period of years, attaching no conditions to the gift, but suggesting that it would be well if the collection, together with other works of the same period, might occupy a separate alcove, the contents of which should ultimately be published in a catalogue, in order that students might know of the existence of these works at the Garden.* This suggestion was at once complied with, so far as the arrangement of the books is concerned, and a separate card catalogue of the Prelinnean library was prepared, but with Dr. Sturtevant's consent its publication has been deferred until the present time for various reasons.

Even a casual inspection of the Prelinnean shelves shows that no study of the cultivated plants of the present time can be at all complete unless the minute and painstaking records of the herbalists are consulted, for, with so mutable a class of plants as our flowers, vegetables, farm crops and fruits, the tracing of their history under cultivation is no small part of their study. What is asserted of cultivated plants, among which it has been stated by one of their most distinguished American students that the artificial evolution of species is being daily effected under our eyes,* is also true, though to a less degree, of the native plants of temperate regions, since the knowledge of wild plants long antedates the period of Linnaeus; which, for practical reasons, is commonly held to mark the beginning of modern botany.

* Fourth Report, 14.

In the classification of a botanical library, the modern period is usually held to begin with the introduction of binomial nomenclature in the first edition of the Species Plantarum, published by Linnaeus in 1753, and this date is, therefore, made the limit of the Prelinnean alcove, at the Garden. Linnaeus, himself, however, had published many books before this date, and these should properly form a part of the Sturtevant library; but for convenience it has seemed better to form a special group of Linneana.

In attempting even so simple a task as cataloguing a collection of early books, greater difficulties are met with than in the case of most modern books. True, the nom de plume was less used then than now; but anonymous works were numerous, and the title of Parkinson's Paradisus Terrestris leads to the suspicion of punning on both subject and author's name in other cases. Frequently, also, letters or minor papers by various authors are either printed with or bound in many of the earlier books, making frequent cross references necessary. And these difficulties are greatly increased by the frequent use of borrowed illustrations, without indication of their source; the numerous editions, sometimes greatly differing, sometimes with illustrations more changed than the text, printed for some of the early writers; their many commentators, often with multiple editions of their commentaries; the simultaneous publication of identical or slightly differing editions in different countries; and the recomposition of reissues of a given edition, giving rise almost inevitably to minor differences which, in the eyes of the bibliophile, are of considerable importance.

* Bailey: Science, Dec. 20, 1895, 834.

Not infrequently, too, the text and figures are not in agreement.

In the preparation of the following catalogue, the preliminary work on which was done by Mr. J. C. Bay, while he was in the employ of the Garden, considerable use has been made of Von Haller's Bibliotheca Botanica, 2 vols., 1771-2; Meyer, Geschichte der Botanik, 4 vols., 1854-7; Reuss, Repertorium Commentationum a Soc. litt. edit., 3 vols., 1801-3; Sachs, Geschichte der Botanik, 1875; Seguius and Bumaldus, Bibliotheca Botanica, 1740; Sprengel, Historia Rei Herbariae, 2 vols., 1807-8, and Geschichte der Botanik, 2 vols., 1817-8; Warming, Den Danske Botaniske Literatur, 1881; Winckler, Geschichte der Botanik, 1854; and Winther, Literaturae Scientiae Rerum Naturalium in Dania, Norvegia & Holsatia, 1829. The principal labor of reading proofs and verifying the entries by comparison with the works has fallen to Mr. C. E. Hutchings. Grateful acknowledgment is also made to the donor of the collection for assistance rendered with many obscure titles, and for reading and annotating the proofs of the catalogue.

The intention has been to spell authors' names as on the title page of each work, except that oblique cases are uniformly reduced to the nominative. Cross references facilitate the collation of the works of a given author who may have published in several languages, modifying his name to suit the idiom of each, — a very frequent custom with the early writers. Translators' or changed editions are catalogued under the author, with cross references under editor or translator. Under each entry the titles are arranged chronologically, except that all editions of a given work under each name come together. Translations or editions of works originally published prior to 1753, are included in the catalogue, even though of recent publication, and though the originals may not be in the library.

Where several works are bound together, the volume is placed on the shelves under the one first found on opening it, each of the others being indicated in the catalogue as “bound with —,” and represented in its proper place on the shelves by a dummy bearing a similar inscription. A small number of folios too large for the regular shelves are arranged in a separate alphabet, but represented in their proper places by dummies indicating this fact. Anonymous works, the author of which could be ascertained, are catalogued and arranged under the author's name, with cross references. Other anonymous works are arranged under the first catchword of the title. The relatively few works not derived from the Sturtevant donation, are marked by an asterisk.

Throughout, the size indication is based on the size rules of the American Library Association, as indicated by Watson's cataloguer's size card, published in 1889, by the Library Bureau of Boston.

Although the Garden library does not contain a copy of this work, it is indebted to Mr. J. C. Bay for an alphabetically arranged manuscript list of about 900 plant names of Bauhin and other Prelinnean writers, employed in it, with reference to the names which those plants now bear. This list is based on annotations in a copy of the book which formerly belonged to Professor E. Nolte, to which Mr. Bay has made numerous additions.
